By TIM BIRCH, REFORMER. NUMB. CIX.

LONDON, SATURDAY, May 13, 1732.

ONE of the sacred Writers has distinguish'd the Character of a merciful Man by his Mercy to his Beast, and Mahomet thought this Tenderness to Animals of such Importance to the Practice of Humanity in general, that he made it an essential Part of a Mussulman. The Indian Branius perhaps carry this Doctrine too far, and their injudicious Concern even for noxious Brutes and Insects, becomes a Cruelty in some Degree to themselves. The Christians are the only People who pretend to the Advantage of a divine Revelation, and yet act with Cruelty to so great a Part of the Works of the Deity they worship; we have no Precept in our Religion to recommend Brutes to our Favour and Compassion, and Infants are very frequently indulg'd in Cruelties to their young ones, whereby they grow habitually savage, and never once imagine these helpless Creatures have the least Title to any better Usage. Whereas, on the contrary, whatever is defenceless has a Demand on our Beneficence, merely because it is so, and a generous Mind will disdain to insult the Weakness that has so just and natural a Plea for its Mercy. Whatever Kindness or Affection Brutes receive from us is chiefly owing to Whim and Caprice, or because they are instrumental to our Pleasures: The first misleads us into Follies of a low and childish Nature, and the last into Indifference or Cruelty, when they can be serviceable to us no more. Ladies are the most liable to this ridiculous Fondness, and Sportsmen to the Barbarity. A Lap-Dog, a Squirrel, a Parrot, a Monkey, a Cat, has engag'd a Lady's Affections more than a Husband or a Lover, and during the Reign of either, it has been treated with more Exactness and Delicacy than a Parent or a Child; numberless Whims have been follow'd for its Entertainment, and the Peace of a whole House disturb'd for a Moment's Neglect.

In Case of any Indisposition, a Physician, a Surgeon, a Nurse, and an Apothecary, have been provided with the utmost Gravity and Seriousness; and if the Patient has miscarried, all have been blam'd with as much Passion, as if the Case had been her own; nay the little Favourite has been buried in State, and Rewards allow'd to Mr. Bowys as his proper Perquisite for writing its Elegy. A Sportsman's Dog or Horse are his bosom Friends, his darling Companions; he is fonder of them than his Wife, and would serve them sooner than his Brother; he had rather feed them than the Poor, and is more solicitous for their Education, and preserving the Breed than for the Heir of his Family and Fortune: But when the Horse is grown old or disabled, and the Dog has lost his Scent or Speed, the first loses all the Delicacy of his former State at once, and is made a Drudge for the Remainder of his Days: The Dog is treated with the utmost Cruelty and Contempt, deny'd almost Food for the Support of Life, liable to continual Insults from the Hand that formerly fondled it most, and made more compleatly miserable by having more Sensibility of the Change. These, as I observ'd before, are the only Instances of the least Humanity that is observ'd to Brutes amongst us: All beside is one continued Scene of Oppression and Misery: A merciful Man can't pass thro' one of our Streets without being a perpetual Witness to it, and feeling his own Misfortunes increas'd by a fruitless Concern and Pity for theirs. Horses, in particular, the most generous and serviceable to us of all other Creatures, frequently die under the Tyranny of their Drivers, and the Hardship of their Toil, and yet no one complains of the Barbarity, and no Magistrate endeavours to punish or prevent it. Neither is this all, we are not barely satisfied with crushing them underneath our Slavery, but we even make a Sport of their Miseries, and grow ingenious in tormenting them. Throwing at Cocks is an annual Inhumanity that pleads Custom for its Continuance, and grows a Mode among the Vulgar as the Season comes round. Bull-baiting is a standing Diversion, and the Pain of the Creature at the Stake, and the Wounds of his Enemies the Dogs is sometimes Sport to the Great and Polite, as well as the Butcher and Carman. Duck-hunting is another of the same Kind, and an Owl is frequently join'd to double the Cruelty, and the Entertainment together. Cock-fighting and Horse-racing are Barbarities in the highest Vogue, and Ladies are now as fond of the last, as the most Savage amongst us. I shall say nothing of Hunting and Shooting, because I almost apprehend being consider'd as lawful Game myself, for daring to oppose those national Amusements. But who, or what are they which we treat in this inhuman Manner? Why Creatures made like ourselves, as fond of Pleasure, as sensible of Pain, as willing to preserve Life, as loth to lose it, quicken'd by the same Breath, actuated by the same Passions, mov'd by the same Organs, and dying by the same Means. Only rang'd in a lower Rank in Life, perhaps to try how well we should deserve more Happiness, by being studious to preserve theirs. At all Events our Mildness to them would teach us to be more mild to one another, and, if Children were to be us'd early to treat them in such a Manner, they would grow habitually compassionate, and never tyrannize in great Power, when they had made a proper Use of less. This alone is a sufficient Motive for Parents to discourage betimes every Spark of Savageness in their Offspring; and use them to Lenity and Mercy. As this is not already a Part either of our Religion or Education, as I despair of ever seeing either influenc'd by the Legislature, and the present Genius of the Nation requires the strictest Regulation; I recommend this Advice to Parents chiefly, because 'tis most in their Power to mold our Inclinations, and the Habits we learn in our Infancy hardly ever forsake us to old Age.

With jet black Pencil, one his Eyebrows dyes,
And adds new Fire to his lascivious Eyes:
Another in a Glass Priapus swills,
While twisted Gold his plaited Tresses fills;
A female Robe, and to compleat the Farce,
His Servant not by Jove, but Juno, swears.

DRYDEN's Juvenal.

SIR,

EFFEMINACY and Luxury, when once they have spread through a Country, are sure Presages of Misery and Ruin. Cyrus, by politickly introducing these Mischiefs enervated and kept under a once warlike People. The Persian Empire was ruined by the like Vices, and Rome, unconquerable by Arms, lost the Terror of her Fame, and became an easy Prey to the barbarous Nations which insulted her, when the Asiatick Luxury had prepar'd the Way for her Subversion.

Happy is it for us, that the Treaty is now concluded with Spain, for I cannot believe, should we have had the Misfortune of a War, that our Troops would again replenish Westminster-Hall with the Standards of the Enemies, except the Ladies, with whom we seem to have barter'd our Spirit for their Delicacy, should take Commissions. And I don't know but the Apprehensions of our making but an ill Figure in the Field, arising from the very fine Figure our young (nay, and many old) Gentlemen make at Home, has induced the Administration (jealous of our Glory) to try all pacifick Means to adjust the Differences between the contending Potentates which we hear has happily succeeded.

They say, an Army of Sheep headed by a Lyon is more to be apprehended, than an Army of Lyons headed by a Sheep. If that is so, what Success can be hoped from our Arms, when our Soldiers are to be commanded by Ganymedes, who wear as much ground Starch in a Year, as the taking a Town would require Gunpowder; who know no Use of their Legs but in a Minuet, and by their ridiculous Toupees would be laid up with Colds as soon as got into the Field. Beside, on any sudden Assault, one Wing of such an Army might be trodden underfoot before the other could be induced to quit the Jauti wearing them in a perpendicular Line. I can't but say the Ladies are much in the right to assume a masculine Dress, since the Men encroach upon their Privileges, and are more Women in their Dress, Air, and Conversation than were their Mothers.

The fine Figure such Officers would make, instead of terrifying, would animate any Enemy, by setting to the View of hungry Soldiers such valuable Plunder. We know the Macedonians look'd upon the gilded and embroider'd Persians, who were deck'd out rather for a Ball than a Battle, as so many Sheep with Golden-Fleeces, of which they might, as they really did, easily strip them. A Pair of fine clock'd Stockings would perhaps prove the Death of the Wearer, and a Diamond Stock-Buckle deny him Quarter; Finery has often been the Loss of the Beau. Plancus Plotius had very probably saved his Life, had he not been a very fine Gentleman; he was proscrib'd by the Triumvirate, but by the Fidelity of his Slaves, hid in a Place where he had been secure, if the Soldiers in their Search, had not smelt him out by his Perfumes, and dragg'd him to Death. Holy Writ gives us an Example of the fatal Effects of Luxury; Absalom was a Beau, and took particular Care of, and Delight in his Hair, which was the Loss of his Life; for that held him helpless till his Enemy run him through. Muly Assy, a King of Tunis, flying in the Throng of his routed Army, was distinguish'd, and taken Prisoner by his Perfumes, brought to his victorious Son, and depriv'd of Sight. And since it is to the present Purpose, I shall divert my Readers with the whimsical Defeat of an Army.

The Sibarites were a People entirely given up to Luxury, they were greater Beaux than any of our Queite Gentlemen, consequently more lazy, as is evident from their looking upon Dancing as too great a Fatigue, for they taught all their Horses this graceful Accomplishment by proper Masters, which (for ought I know) gave Rise to the French Proverb, Poli comme un Cheval de Carosse. When they made Entertainments, the Players of the Flute were sent for, and their Horses diverted them with different Dances on their hind Legs, very gracefully managing their Forefeet. These People had some Disputes with the Crotoniates, who were inferior to them in Number. In one of the aforesaid Entertainments, a Piper happen'd to be scurvily used, and not being able to obtain Justice, he went over to the Crotoniates, and promis'd them Victory, if they would attack their Enemies, and follow his Advice. They, after some Consultation, agreed to give him the Command of a Party of Horse: He immediately set his Men to the Practice of certain Tunes on the Flute, and when they were perfect, march'd against his Countrymen; who came out to meet him, with Assurance of Victory, from their Numbers; as soon as the Piper found himself within a proper Distance, he order'd his Men to handle their Flutes, which the Horses of the Enemy no sooner heard, but they were bolt upright, their Riders cast, and an orderly Dance begun. The Piper led off his Party playing, and the Enemies Horses dancing after; while another Party, without Trouble, made Prisoners of their Riders.

But, there is nothing more ridiculous than to preach to the Deaf, or desire the Blind to give their Judgment of Colours. I am pretty much of Opinion, that all the Reasons I can allege, and all the Examples I may produce of the pernicious Effects of Effeminacy, will avail but little, towards the shaking off this inglorious Vice. I shall therefore conclude with a Word of Admonition to the Ladies, as the only Method to root out the Evil, which is to admit none to admire their Beauty, whom they do not esteem Men enough to defend it; and such they will seldom find among the Effeminate and Luxurious.

Extract of a Letter from Galata near Conſtantinople, dated the 25th of March laſt.

The 25th of February, Capt. Petre, of the Williams, invited our Ambaſſador, and all our Nation, to dine on board him; his Excellency being detained by ſome accidental Buſineſs, could not go on board till near Three o'Clock in the Afternoon, which cauſed him to ſtay till late; he did not depart till it was paſt Nine o'Clock, when the Captain, to make his Acknowledgment for the Favour which his Excellency had ſhewn him, juſt after his going off fir'd 15 Guns. This ſo alarm'd the Grand Seignior, who was at his Prayers, that he immediately ſent for the Vizier, and being in a panick Fear, he flew into a violent Paſſion at the Vizier's Entrance, and gave him a great Romancina; the Vizier immediately diſpatch'd the Boſtangee Baſha to the Ship, who, at his coming along-ſide of her, asked if there was any Druggerman on board, and was anſwered, there was none; he then asked why they had fired thoſe Guns, and was anſwered, that the Ambaſſador had been on board, and was juſt then gone off, and the Guns were fired to ſalute his Excellency; and the Boſtangee Baſha ordered them to fire no more, and then departed, and went and related this to the Grand Seignior and Vizier; upon which the Grand Seignior asked the Vizier what Puniſhment they deſerved, and the Vizier (like a brutal Perſon, as he is) anſwered, that the Ship ought to be ſunk, the Captain hanged, and the Ambaſſador ſent away; which the Grand Seignior in his Paſſion immediately conſented to, and gave his Orders for the ſame. The next Morning the Vizier ſent an Aga to call our Ambaſſador to the Porte, and at the ſame Time ſent a Chouſe to call the head Druggerman of every Nation likewiſe to the Porte. Our Ambaſſador went about Ten o'Clock to the Porte, at his Arrival he was conducted into the uſual Room there, and then the Vizier ſent for all the head Druggermen to come into the Room where he (the Vizier) was; on their Appearance he ſhow'd an exceſſive Anger, and the Reis Effendi asked every one of them, whether he had not order'd that their Ships ſhould not ſire in the Night-time; to which they all anſwered yes. Then the Vizier asked which was the Engliſh Druggerman, who being ſhowed to him, he gave him very abuſive Language, treating our Ambaſſador with very foul Words, and bid the Druggerman tell his Excellency that he muſt depart from hence, for the Grand Seignior would not know him any longer for an Ambaſſador, and that the Letter from the Grand Seignior to our King was writing, in which he would give his Reaſons to our King for ſending him away, and ſo diſmiſſed our Druggerman, who was Sig. Antonio Piſani; he came to his Excellency, who asked him what the Vizier had ſaid to him, and when he ſhould be admitted in to him; Sig. Piſani, being in a terrible Fright, (having entertained the Thoughts that he might be hanged on this Occaſion) only told his Excellency that the Vizier was in a prodigious Paſſion, and would not ſee him; upon which his Excellency immediately left the Porte, and came to his Palace. Upon his coming away, the Vizier order'd the Druggerman to be called back, and carried to the Vizier Kyah, who bid him go and bring all the Merchants to him. He came over, and afterwards return'd with Meſſ. Liſle and Maydwell and Mr. Barker, who were carried before the Kyah, when he ſpoke very warmly to them, and told them that the Grand Seignior would no longer know our Ambaſſador for an Ambaſſador, and therefore they muſt chuſe one among the Merchants to be the Ambaſſador's Vekile. Theſe Gentlemen began to tell the Kyah that our Ambaſſador was not in the leaſt Fault in this Affair, and that it happen'd thro' the Ignorance of the Captain; but the Kyah would not hearken to them, but ſent them away to chuſe a Vekile. The ſame Morning the Vizier ſent to the Cuſtomer to find out and ſecure the Captain; the Cuſtomer being apprehenſive (as I have been informed) that if the Captain ſhould be taken, in that Fury, it might prove an ugly Affair to the Captain and Nation, and therefore thought it more prudent to ſend for ſome of the Merchants and confine them, which muſt conſequently put the Captain upon abſconding himſelf, ſo the Cuſtomer ſent for all the Merchants to come down to him, under Pretence that the Grand Seignior wanted ſome Pieces of very fine Cloth; none of our Gentlemen, excepting Mr. Hanger and Mr. Jennings, would go down to him; when they were at the Cuſtom-houſe in Galata, they were ſent over to the Cuſtom-houſe at Stambole, and the Aga immediately confin'd them to a Room, and ſent the Vizier word, that he had got two of the Merchants, but could not find the Captain; the Vizier ſent him back Word, that they muſt produce the Captain, which being told to them, they ſaid they could not tell where the Captain was. The Captain having Notice of theſe Proceedings, thought prudent to abſcond, and was carried the next Night, by our head Druggerman, Sig. Luca Chiricco, into the Dutch Palace, and the Dutch Ambaſſador was ſo kind as to go to our Ambaſſador, and offer his Service to endeavour to make up this Affair at Court, which our Ambaſſador accepted of, and the Dutch Ambaſſador employ'd his head Druggerman at the Court, but he unluckily made a falſe Step in his Proceedings, and met with a great Romancina at Court, ſo the Affair was obliged to ſtand ſtill for a Day or two, when our good Fortune was, that the Vizier was changed; and then my Lord Kinnoul took the Affair under his own Management, and by his great Prudence and Ability in Affairs, he has brought it to a happy Concluſion; for his Excellency found Means to have this Affair repreſented to the Grand Seignior, when the Grand Seignior, being conſcious of the irregular Proceedings to the Repreſentative of a crown'd Head, and to a Nation, who had on ſeveral Occaſions demonſtrated their Friendſhip to the Ottoman Empire, he immediately ſent for the Vizier the 11th Inſt. about Eight o'Clock at Night, and gave him an Order, under his own Hand Writing, that the Merchants ſhould be releaſed, and that the Druggerman of the Porte ſhould be ſent to our Ambaſſador, with a Compliment and Excuſe from him for what had paſſed, and the Grand Seignior ſtrictly ordered that no Perſon whatſoever ſhould take the leaſt Preſent from his Excellency or Nation, on this Account, ſo accordingly the next Day Meſſ. Hanger and Jennings were releaſed, and the Druggerman of the Porte waited on our Ambaſſador, and made a very handſome Excuſe from the Grand Seignior and Vizier for the Affront that had been put upon his Excellency.

After which the Court was pleaſed to admit exhibited Articles againſt Mr. Baynton Mr. Ladbrook's Executor, for uſing Arms, &c. not belonging to his Family, and two Witneſſes were produced and ſworn and a Time appointed for their Examination. Then the Court proceeded againſt Sir John Blount, Bart. who, by his Counſel, denied the Juriſdiction of the Court, but that being over-ruled, an Attachment was order'd againſt him for Non-Appearance; and then Mr. Phillips appear'd as Proctor for him. The Squadron of Men of War under the Command of the Right Hon. the Lord Viſcount Torrington, are ordered to rendezvous at the Nore, to be in Readineſs to receive his Majeſty.

They write from Mitchel-Dean in Glouceſterſhire, that on Friday the 28th of April laſt, between the Hours of Seven and Eight in the Evening, one Thomas Turbeville, a Carpenter, was murder'd in a moſt barbarous and inhuman Manner in his own Shop, having his Brains beat out and his Skull chopp'd to Pieces with a broad Ax: The Deceaſed being a Widower and having no Child lived alone, and was not found till Saturday Evening, when the Ax was found lying by him bloody. A Weaver of the ſaid Town is taken up on Suſpicion, having been obſerved between the Hours above-mention'd to follow the ſaid Turbeville into his Houſe, and the Deceaſed was not ſeen afterwards till found in the Manner aforeſaid: And when the ſuppos'd Murderer was on Examination before the Coroner, a Pair of Stockings and a Shirt was found upon him, whereupon he was committed to Glouceſter Caſtle.

Yeſterday the Court of King's-Bench was moved for an Information againſt Mr. Osborne a Printer in the Minories, for printing and publiſhing a Libel reflecting on the Jews, charging ſome of them with committing a barbarous Murder in burning an Infant begot by a Chriſtian on the Body of a Jewiſh Woman; by Reaſon of which they are frequently inſulted by the Populace. The Court granted a Rule for the Defendant to ſhew Cauſe this Term.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Hague, April 15. N. S.

CERTAIN Miniſters here having lately diſcourſed that of Spain about the preſent Armament of the King his Maſter, he anſwered that none of the Powers in Alliance had any Reaſon to take Umbrage at it; that his Catholick Majeſty had particular Cauſe of Complaint againſt the Genoeze, for ſome Seizure made at the Inſtances of the Imperialiſts during the late War; for which he might now juſtly call them to Account, if ſuch were his Pleaſure, &c. Thoſe who will have the Spaniſh Expedition to be deſigned againſt Italy, put us in Remembrance that it is not the firſt Time that his Catholick Majeſty has made a War in Barbary the Pretence for obtaining the Tenths of the Clergy in his Dominions: Witneſs the Time of Cardinal Alberoni's Miniſtry, when the very ſame Thing was done, that is now. And beſides (ſay they) the putting the Horſes on board at Valencia is no great Sign of their going to Barbary; for the Paſſage to Sicily from Valencia is as eaſy as from Barcelona.

Extract of a Private Letter from Paris.

Mynheer Van Hoey, Ambaſſador of the Republick of Holland, has lately had ſeveral extraordinary Conferences with the Principal Secretary of State; wherein he has heard enough of the Acceſſion of his Maſters to the Treaty of Vienna. Several advantageous Propoſals were made to him before it was done; but ſince he has notified it, he finds it is reſented that the States-General ſhould take that Step without his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty's Conſent. However, Mynheer Van Hoey anſwered in general Terms, that their High-Mightineſſes Act of Acceſſion had not a Clauſe in it which was contrary to the Intereſts of any Power whatſoever.

Extract of a Private Letter from Vienna.

The frequent Conferences which are multiplied here, and the great Number of Couriers who are continually paſſing and repaſſing, make us preſume there are Circumſtances which threaten a dangerous Rupture. It is even ſaid, the Duke of Liria will ſhortly depart this Court; and that there is a new ſecret Alliance concluded between France and Spain, which tends altogether to give a new Form to the Syſtem of Europe, beginning with Italy. We are aſſured, that the Emperor had a good Share in the double Marriages between the Houſes of Pruſſia and Bevern; and that his Imperial Majeſty expreſſed a particular Satisfaction in the good Succeſs of that Negotiation: The more, becauſe it was apprehended that the Prince Royal would have ſhewn as violent a Repugnance againſt this Alliance, as he did againſt that with the Princeſs of Mecklemburg, who is now deſigned for the Prince his Brother. Count Wratiſlau has actually ſent away his heavy Baggage from Muſcovy, and was ſpeedily to follow it himſelf, ſo that he is ſoon expected here.

To Mr. EDWARD CAVE, at St. John's-Gate.

SIR,

'You being the Undertaker of the GENTLEMAN's MAGAZINE, 'we cannot help charging you with that ſcurrilous N. B. which follows 'the Advertiſement of that Book. Your Aſſurance we think is very extraordinary, in reflecting upon us for compiling a Book of this Kind, 'from the publick Papers, in ſeveral of which we have a Property; when 'you have not the leaſt Share in any one of them; which makes your 'Work little leſs than a downright Pyracy. As to ſupplanting you, in 'your Deſign, Pray, Sir, who gave you (a Proprietor in no one Paper) a 'Right, excluſive of all others, even of Proprietors themſelves, to a Deſign of this Nature? In other Caſes, where Perſons are upon a Level (as 'you are not in this Caſe) one and the ſame Deſign lies open and free to 'ſeveral, to execute in the beſt Manner they can. Is not this the Caſe of 'Manufactures, of Arts and Sciences, and of News-Papers themſelves? 'Whence elſe are there ſo many at this Time? But as the Publick is to 'judge which is the beſt Manufacture, or Book of the Kind, and which 'is the beſt News-Paper; ſo they muſt be the Judges, which is the beſt 'MAGAZINE, our London, or your Gentleman's. We fear not the Iſſue 'of their Judgments, notwithſtanding your modeſtly charging us with being defective, for omitting ſome trifling Things of little or no Uſe or Entertainment, when we can make it appear you have omitted Papers and 'Things of Importance in that very Magazine, you oppoſe to ours. We 'are willing ours ſhould be compared with yours, Eſſay for Eſſay; and ſhall 'ſay no more, but ſubmit the London Magazine both as to Compiling, 'Paper, and Letter, to the Judgment of the Publick, not doubting but they 'will encourage thoſe moſt by whom they are moſt agreeably entertain'd.
